DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The title of the invention is not descriptive. A new title is required that is clearly indicative of the invention to which the claims are directed.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ryuichi (JP 10-209272), in view of Fitch et al. (U.S. Patent # 5,554,870).

As to claims 1 and 4, Ryuichi shows, referring to figure 10, a substrate 1 with an interconnect layer 2 formed on the substrate and including an interconnect body and a conductive film formed on the interconnect body. An interlayer insulating film 3 is formed so as to cover the interconnect layer. A conductor 8 is formed in the contact hole extending through the interlayer insulating film and includes a first region in contact with the top surface portion of the interconnect layer and a second region in contact with a side surface portion of the interconnect layer. The end face of the interconnect body is withdrawn relative to an end face of the conductive film. The interconnect body and the second region of the conductor are connected to each other with a portion of the interlayer insulating film interposed therebetween. Ryuichi fails to show a high resistance layer formed in a side surface of the interconnect body which is in contact with the second region of the conductor.

Fitch et al. is cited for showing an integrated circuit having both vertical and horizontal devices and process for making the same. Specifically, Fitch et al. shows, in figure 12, a high resistance layer 22' formed in a side surface of the interconnect body. It would have been obvious to use the high resistance sidewall of Fitch et al. with the device of Ryuichi for the purpose of reducing or resisting plasma damage.

Claims 2-3 are product-by-process claims:

Note that a "product by process" claim is directed to the product per se, no matter how actually made, In re Hirao, 190 USPQ 15 at 17 (footnote 3). See also In re Thorpe, 227 USPQ 964, 966; In re Luck, 177 USPQ 523; In re Fessmann, 180 USPQ 324; In re Avery, 186 USPQ 161; In re Wertheim, 191 USPQ 90 (209 USPQ 554 does not deal with this issue); and In re Marosi et al., 218 USPQ 289, all of which make it clear that it is the patentability of the final product per se which must be determined in a "product by process" claim, and not the patentability of the process, and that an old or obvious product produced by a new method is not patentable as a product, whether claimed in "product by process" claims or not. Note that applicant has the burden of proof in such cases, as the above case law makes clear. See also MPEP 2113.
